

Double Sided Journal for Chapters 1-6

Mrs. Brogley

Quote w/Page Numbers	What I have to say
"When I was three and Bailey four, we had arrived....wearing tags on our wrists...from Long Beach...en route to Stamps, Az." (5).	As a kid I rarely traveled so I can't imagine what this would be like. I've been to DC, but I don't remember it. Other than that, I've stayed in Wisconsin.
"...we were locked up in a Fun House of Things where the attendant had gone home for life" (6)	What does that entirely mean? Fun house of things - I get that, but ...the attendant has gone home for life? Wha?
"He was standing erect behind the counter, not leaning forward or resting on the small shelf that had been built for him" (12).	I feel bad for Uncle Willy. For some reason he wanted to see "normal" to those people, but in doing so he started to stutter. I guess that reminds me of people that try really hard to fit in with whatever "normal" is today.
"...tell Willy he better lay low tonight" (17)..	When I taught American Studies we read a few things of this same nature - random lynchings by the KKK.
"From the Uglies" (22).	Ha! This part is funny. Bailey is cool in how he'll stick up for Maya.
"We would go to the well and wash in the ice-cold, clear water, grease our legs with the equally cold stiff Vaseline" (27).	Greasing your legs w/Vaseline?
Pages 30-32 - the scene where the white girls are disrespecting Momma.	At first I didn't see what the big deal was but then I realized that it's the 1930's and there isn't a thing Momma can do to them, even though they're just little girls. Maya made reference to wanting to grab the rifle - while I wouldn't do that, I can really sympathize with her hurt. It would be sooo hard for me to watch someone disrespecting my mom or grandma.
"Preach it!" (45)	Oh my gosh - this part is so funny. I can visualize it so easily. I really like how Maya writes. She's got a pretty good sense of humor. If I ever could find time to do it, this scene would be hilarious to act out in class.
